Should you find yourself suddenly overwhelmed by a craving for the fragrant aroma of Indian spices, this is the place to head for. The restaurant may not look thrilling from the outside, but it offers an exciting blend of exotic culinary exploration with the best of central European standards. The owners are proud of their combination of Indian and French specialties. But would you really go for shrimp cocktail or filet mignon when the menu offers such enticements as lobster with tropical fruit and curry sauce or lamb with onions, tomatoes and ginger? We warmly recommend a simple but delicious opening to the meal: an oven-fresh flat bread filled with spinach and sheep's milk cheese. And try "Gulab Jamin" as a dessert. You won't be disappointed. Most Indian dishes are best washed down with a glass of beer. The selection of wines is as modest as that suggests.
